Mill City Commons Halloween Party: A Frighteningly Good Time!

On Saturday, October 31st Mill City Commons Members, friends and neighbors gathered at Washburn Lofts for a potluck Halloween celebration. Costumes ranging from a bumble bee to wizards to a skeleton were sported by members. Fantastic masks were also in abundance. The event was one of many organized each month by the Member Services Committee to foster the community building that is at the core of MCC's mission. Said one MCC member, "I loved seeing the neighbors gathered together having a good time."

Guess who? Masked MCCers!

All MCC All the Time

Mill City Commons Featured in Local and National Publications

In October Mill City Commons was recognized for both its member services and its utilization of technology in several publications. Mill City Commons Member Lloyd Beebe is featured in the RiverWest newsletter discussing his experience with MCC and its member services. "They've been a lifesaver," says Lloyd, "I don't know what I would do without them." Click here to read the full story (on page 6).

Mill City Commons was featured in a national publication, "The State of Technology in Aging Services in Minnesota," for our innovative use of technology to improve services to members. The publication is intended to serve as a best-practice guide for states nationwide. Click here to read the feature on MCC (page 36)!

Minneapolis Riverfront Then and Now, 1858 and 2008, Mill City Museum, Opening November 12th

Photographer Jerry Mathiason and Mill City Museum embarked on a project during the state sesquicentennial in 2008 to document change on the Minneapolis riverfront, selecting historic photos from the era of statehood (1850s-1860s) and taking photographs of the modern landscape from the same vantage point. The pairs of then and now photographs reveal the dramatic changes to the city over the past 150 years.
